God of All Comfort

The movie “Miracles of Heaven” tells the true story of a young girl named Annabel who recovers from an incurable intestinal disorder. My take from the movie though is not about the girl’s recovery nor her vision of heaven. Instead I saw two parents struggle with their faith, and in the end their faith is greatly strengthened because they went through their trials. One parent, the mother of Annabel, for a time appeared to lose her faith as she shows signs of doubting God; wondering why God allowed this to happen to her daughter and not understanding why God seemed not to be answering her prayers. The other parent was the father of a girl who had cancer and the daughter dies after having shared a room with Annabel. He had no faith to begin with and doubted the existence of God. But Annabel gives her necklace with a cross to his daughter; telling her that the cross gave her comfort and helped her trust that God was near. The daughter with cancer does find comfort in the necklace during her dying days and as a result her father begins to believe there is a God who responds to the needs of people. Annabel discovered something most Christians struggle with – how to comfort the dying and the bereaved.

Perhaps, the greatest challenge we as Christians may face is how to bring comfort to others facing trials. Whether it’s life threatening or not, Christian or non-Christian, it is a difficult task to help someone in need of encouragement. Those who have been through various hardships are the best equipped for this task. Paul in 2 Cor. 1:3-4 says, “Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies and God of all comfort, who comforts us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort those who are in any trouble, with the comfort with which we ourselves are comforted by God.” The trials we face accomplish two of God’s purposes. First, they strengthen our own faith when we overcome or learn to deal with our trial; then secondly they prepare us to help others overcome their trials.

Christians who experience grief or go through long illness or other difficult ordeals, they know that God’s comfort seldom comes immediately, even though God has the power to bring comfort at His will. Instead the hurting Christian learns to deal with their present circumstance through God’s assurance; the assurance that if they hold onto their faith eventually things will get better. This is God’s promise, this is the anchor for the soul written about in Hebrews 6:18-19. And this is what we should share with the hurting and the grieving, Christian and non-Christian. This is one very important way that we share the love of Christ to the hurting and lost of this world. So we should remember that the God of all comfort prepares us to comfort others.
